From The Internet Of Information ... To The Internet Of Value

The Web is entering its second act. Through a clever mix of code, cryptography, collaboration, and consensus, Blockchain is transforming the Internet of Information ... into the Internet of Value.

A type of Distributed Ledger Technology (DLT), Blockchain is setting a new standard for securely storing, exchanging, and managing anything of value: be it currency, contracts, health records, patents, products, votes, even creative assets.

Along with unprecedented levels of security, transparency, and permanence, the applications of this open-source, peer-to-peer platform are staggering. Now the Internet Of Things (IoT) can now be secured through a veritable Ledger Of Things. Token economies can be built around cryptocurrencies. And “smart contracts” can be automated, and self-execute.

Moreover, consumers can own the data they create. Digital identities can be affixed to physical objects—whether to authenticate ownership, to track object provenance, or to optimize supply chains. And more.

But Blockchain isn't only a breakthrough for what it enables; it is a game-changer for what it removes: Freed from the barriers, bureaucracy, and intermediaries of the old guard, Blockchain powers a new digital order of ingenuity, inclusion, and security.

Because now, billions of people who have always been marginalized, can finally enter the global economy. Indeed, history will look upon Blockchain as the lever that made the Web a truly World Wide resource.

In this exciting, eye-opening, session, speaker, futurist, and professor Christina “CK” Kerley takes audiences on a tour of how Blockchain is igniting a chain reaction of disruption—and innovation—across a global stage.
