Racing For Relevance In The Age Of Acceleration

In this eye-opening session Christina “CK” Kerley brings audiences through Survival Of The Fastest: an age of extreme acceleration that (forever!) flips the business-as-usual script.

Never before has so much changed, so fast. Technologies are increasing. Timelines are compressing. Expectations are skyrocketing. And businesses must evolve at the speed of ideas.

Size is no longer an asset—it’s become a liability. In a historic reversal, the big no longer crush the small . . . now it’s the fast that eat the slow. We’re not undergoing a singular “New Normal.” On the contrary, we’ll be experiencing an entire series of “NEWest Normal(s)” throughout this chaotic decade.

Moreover, as AIs get smarter (and faster!), they’ll impact the jobs that we’ll do, the tasks that we’ll automate, and our levels of human-machine collaboration. Success will surely become a function of the priority that we place upon re-refreshing our skills, and the alacrity at which we re-invent our roles.

Make no mistake, in the sprint for survival, fast is the new big, speed is the silver bullet, and adaptability is the killer app.

As a companion to this session, through “Re-lentless Re-invention,” CK outlays a 4-part framework for successfully navigating companies (and careers) through non-stop disruption.
